Mie and Nara prefectures are located close together on the Kii Peninsula in the center of Japan, and have nurtured Japan's history and culture since ancient times, and are inseparably linked. The weight of history, which has continued since the age of myth, can be said to be blended into the very air of this region. A trip to the two prefectures will not only give you unforgettable impressions of the rich nature and long history, but will also be a trip to encounter the original landscape of the Japanese heart.
